

About the SOPA Awards for Editorial Excellence

The SOPA Awards for Editorial Excellence were established in 1999 as a tribute to editorial excellence in both traditional and new media, and were designed to encourage editorial vitality throughout the region. The awards cover a broad range of categories reflecting Asia's diverse geopolitical environment and vibrant editorial scene.

Central to the SOPA Awards' ongoing success is the high caliber of international judges who preside over the award entries. The SOPA Awards have consistently secured judges from many of the region's leading newspapers as well as consumer and trade magazines and academics from prestigious universities – a reflection of the stature of the awards. Judges ensure that entries are analyzed and selected according to a demanding set of criteria.

The SOPA Awards are coordinated by a committee of publishing professionals from the business and editorial sectors. These dedicated individuals volunteer their time throughout the year to ensure the awards, rules, judges, entries, sponsorships and promotions all come together smoothly.

The SOPA Awards set a valuable benchmark for the industry, and have become news items in their own right, generating media coverage and attention not only across the Asia-Pacific region, but also in the global arena.

Corporate Support

Sponsorship is key to ensuring the awards' growth, and over the past years, SOPA has been fortunate in receiving strong, continuous support from its partners. As the awards have grown, so too has the interest from corporations, and this year, we look again to the generosity of sponsors to help us deliver the best awards we can.

The SOPA 2016 Awards for Editorial Excellence is supported by Invest Hong Kong (Platinum Sponsor) and Google (Gold Sponsor). CatchOn is the public relations partner, Media OutReach is the newswire partner, and High Technology Printing Group Limited is the printing partner.

SOPA Chairman's Message

Welcome to the 18th Annual SOPA Awards for Editorial Excellence.

The Society of Publishers in Asia (SOPA) was established in 1982 as a not-for-profit association with a founding tenet to recognize and celebrate the highest measures of journalistic quality and integrity. Today, the SOPA Awards for Editorial Excellence are highly coveted and regarded as the industry gold standard for journalism in Asia Pacific.

We are especially proud to have received a record number of entries this year. Each entry is evaluated against an exacting set of criteria. We value the steadfast commitment made by our team of leading international judges and the Editorial Committee, chaired by SK Witcher, who all selflessly volunteer their time. As is our tradition, the SOPA Awards are again assisted this year by experienced administrators at the Journalism and Media Studies Centre, The University of Hong Kong.

As we celebrate the 2016 SOPA Awards, special thanks and appreciation are due our sponsors: Invest Hong Kong, Google, Media Outreach, CatchOn and High Technology Printing Group Limited. Their support is vital to the success of this important event.

SOPA's enduring commitment to excellence is evidenced by a wide range of initiatives: SOPA stands as an unwavering proponent of freedom of the press in Asia; we advocate best business practices that support and sustain our industry; and SOPA embraces technological advances that best serve the information needs of our audiences, magnifying both the scope and impact of our content.

In partnership with the Bring Me A Book Foundation, SOPA champions an ongoing commitment to encourage and develop literacy skills in underprivileged children. And throughout the year, SOPA produces a series of Media Insider events that serve as a forum to bring together the publishing community to share ideas and consider authoritative and diverse points of view.

Tonight, we recognize the very best in our field. We are also pleased to celebrate the lifetime achievements of Ms. Ying Chan, as she is inducted into the Society of Publishers in Asia as an Honorary Member.

On behalf of the SOPA Board, we extend our appreciation to all award entrants who share our passion and strive to be the best. We thank you for joining us this evening.

Enjoy the program!

Keynote Speaker

Ma Ying-jeou

Former President
Taiwan

Ma Ying-jeou was elected president of Taiwan in 2008 and was in power for eight years, leaving office on May 20. He began his two-term presidency by pledging to improve cross-strait relations, international relations and the domestic economy. A capstone of his tenure was a historic meeting with China's leader, Xi Jinping, in November 2015. It was the first such meeting since the 1940s, when the Chinese Nationalists retreated across the Taiwan Strait after being defeated in a civil war by the Communists.

On the domestic front, Mr. Ma's administration initiated reforms in various areas, including restructuring the central and local government, education, health care, welfare, taxation, income distribution, law and order and the environment.

Born in Hong Kong in 1950, Mr. Ma graduated from Harvard Law School in 1981. He is married to Madam Chow Mei-ching, and they have two daughters. Before he was elected president, Mr. Ma held several government posts, most notably as vice minister of the Mainland Affairs Council, as Taiwan's justice minister and as mayor of Taipei. He also served three terms as the chairman of the Kuomintang, or Nationalist Party, from 2005 to 2013.

SOPA Honorary Member 2016

Ms. Yuen Ying Chan

Yuen Ying Chan is a journalist, journalism professor and media consultant. From 1999 to 2016, she served as the founding director of the Journalism and Media Studies Centre at The University of Hong Kong, a teaching and research department offering professional education, undergraduate and graduate degree programs. JMSC graduates work at major media organizations throughout the world, and some have launched start-ups to explore new forms of journalism in the digital age.

Under Ms. Chan's leadership, the JMSC has become the hub of pan-Asian journalism promoting journalism standards, freedom of expression and digital innovations. The JMSC is also a pioneer in the teaching of convergent media, data journalism and media entrepreneurship. It has served as the administrator of the SOPA Awards since 2011.

Ms. Chan also was the founding dean (2003-12) of the journalism school at Shantou University, China, where she set up programs grounded in journalism values of balance, fairness and truth-telling.

Before joining The University of Hong Kong in 1998, she spent 23 years working as a reporter and editor in New York City for the New York Daily News, NBC News and Chinese-language dailies. Her honors include a Nieman Fellowship at Harvard University and a George Polk Award for her coverage of the people-smuggling trade from China. For her battle against a criminal libel suit in Taiwan, she was awarded an International Press Freedom Award by the Committee to Protect Journalists in 1997. In 2013, she received a Lifetime Achievement Award from the Asian American Journalists Association in the United States.

Ms. Chan consults often for Chinese and international media organizations and contributes to the global journalism community through her many public service roles. She is on the board of directors of the Media Development Investment Fund and is a member of the World Economic Forum on Social Media. She is a founding member of the International Consortium of Investigative Journalists and has edited six books on the media in mainland China.

Ms. Chan will retire from the JMSC in August and is plotting her life after.

He was a senior producer with Reuters Television, the international news and information broadcast agency, from 1998 to 2009, interviewing world leaders, captains of industry and others from Afghanistan to East Timor.

He had also had an earlier stint in Reuters as a political and economic news correspondent and was briefly a producer in AP Television.

He started his career in the New Straits Times and spent a year in Business Times before joining Reuters.

Editorial Committee Chair's Message

As the Editorial Awards for Excellence mark their 18th year, the takeaway from the record-breaking number of entries received is: Good journalism is alive and kicking in the Asia-Pacific region!

That's all the more notable given the rising challenges to journalists doing their jobs in almost every part of the region – not just in countries traditionally hostile to a free press – but also in more open societies like Japan, where there's pressure to toe the government line.

Crackdowns on media in mainland China have continued apace, while in Hong Kong, threats to press freedom are on the increase as are perceptions of greater levels of self-censorship among local journalists. The mysterious disappearance of five Hong Kong booksellers who were associated with provocative books about top mainland figures has fueled the unease, especially because some were holding overseas passports.

Elsewhere around the region, Thailand's military government has called for an "attitude adjustment" among its critics, and recent measures appear aimed at restricting visas for certain foreign reporters. And in Malaysia, the country's sedition laws are being used to help clamp down on local journalists.

The Editorial Committee is composed of working reporters, editors and academics, who volunteer their time. They all deserve a big thanks as does the Journalism and Media Studies Centre of The University of Hong Kong for its vital role in administering the awards and ensuring their independence and credibility.

Head of Judges' Message

There's a lot of outstanding journalism to celebrate this year, and yet again I was awestruck by the courageous reporting that went into so many of the entries.

That result is all the more impressive considering the many threats facing the region's media, including budget cuts that have sidelined many talented colleagues as the industry struggles to adapt to the digital-media age and changing consumer habits.

The competition was also fiercer: the average number of entries in each category was 14, with eight categories registering more than 20 entries. While it's wonderful to see so many worthy submissions in a such a diverse group of categories, that also means our judges – all busy professionals in their own right – had to work harder than ever this year. The SOPA Awards enjoy the respect and reputation they have today in no small part because of the respect and reputation of the judges who volunteer their expertise. On behalf of the SOPA Awards administrator, I thank them.

This year's entries have clearly demonstrated the immense talent of the region's journalists, and how valuable their work is in revealing to the world human rights abuses of migrant laborers, the plight of women in tradition-bound societies, and networks of corruption at the highest levels, to mention just a few topics represented this year. I know I speak for the 100 industry professionals who served as judges when I say it was an honor, albeit an often exhausting one, to review so much excellent work.

IN MEMORIAM

Tom Leander

Tom Leander was an unflagging proponent of press freedom in Asia and a serious voice for integrity in Asia's media.

A longtime business reporter, his final post was in maritime journalism as Asia editor-in-chief of Lloyd's List. He was known as an avid mentor, a charity volunteer, and a composer of music. He is universally remembered as a gentleman and generous human being.

Tom devoted much of his free time over many years to serving on the Editorial Committee of The Society of Publishers in Asia, including as the committee's chairman from 2012 until January of this year. He continued to serve as a member of the committee sharing the workload and providing invaluable guidance.

He was a tireless spokesman for SOPA's mission to uphold the highest standards of journalism and to reward the best of those efforts around the region through the annual SOPA Awards for Editorial Excellence.

His unexpected death in March at the age of 61 left a big hole in all our hearts and on the Editorial Committee where his wise counsel is sorely missed.
